

Boyd & Jenerette, P.A. traces its origins to 1952, when Charles T. Boyd, Jr. and Noah H. Jenerette, Jr. formed what would soon grow into a well respected trial and litigation practice with deep roots in the communities of Jacksonville, Florida.

Since then the Firm has been in continuous operation in downtown Jacksonville with offices in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, Savannah, Georgia and Charlotte, North Carolina and enjoys a long history of advocacy in the state and federal courts throughout Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, and in other jurisdictions. The Firm's attorneys and professional staff enjoy a reputation for excellence in client service.

Boyd & Jenerette is best known for its leadership and success in the field of civil litigation defense, trial practice, workers' compensation, longshore claims and commercial litigation. The Firm has a long established reputation of excellence in advocacy to achieve its client's goals whether through pre-suit resolution, mediation, arbitration or trial. The Firm works with its clients and devotes time to understanding their business and the results they wish to achieve through the litigation process. The Firm's lawyers maintain active litigation and trial dockets in the specialty areas of automotive and products liability, bad faith litigation, appellate practice, healthcare litigation, longshore & defense base act, maritime, mass tort litigation, premises and professional liability, insurance coverage disputes, commercial and business disputes, real estate disputes, transportation and logistics claims, workers' compensation, administrative appeals, and labor and employment defense.
